

SHIPPING LAW at UCT

The University of Cape Town is the only university in Africa (and one of only a few in the world) which offers postgraduate tuition and research facilities in both public and private law aspects of marine and maritime law.

Through the Shipping Law Unit, the Faculty of Law offers a specialist LLM (Marine) programme covering the international law of the sea and shipping law, and also offers Postgraduate Diplomas in Shipping Law and in Marine and Environmental Law. Supervised research facilities are available for PhD degrees.

The Shipping Law Unit provides postgraduate and higher postgraduate tuition and research in Admiralty law and practice and in all private law aspects of the law relating to the sea and ships. It serves as an information and advice centre to the shipping industry, and monitors developments in maritime law and policy in South Africa and abroad. The Unit cooperates closely with the Institute of Marine and Environmental Law which handles the public law elements of the Law of the Sea and related subjects.

The Shipping Law Unit has been in operation since 1993, and was set up in the Department of Commercial Law to accommodate part-time and full-time studies in Shipping Law at higher postgraduate level. The Unit supports the Maritime Law caput offered to final level LLB students.
