Find out more about dawn raids - with practical guidance on how to respond to and survive a dawn raid, with a view to avoiding any legal consequences and preventing unnecessary disruption of business operations.

A dawn raid is an unexpected search and seizure process used by the Competition Commission of South Africa to investigate potentially anti-competitive conduct. A dawn raid can have a massive impact on business operations, so it is essential for businesses and employees to be fully prepared and to know what is expected of them when a dawn raid is conducted. Failure to comply with legal obligations during a dawn raid can result in the imposition of significant fines, civil or criminal sanctions.

The course will benefit: attorneys; advocates; legal graduates; legal advisors; corporate counsel; regulatory professionals; and compliance officers.

PRESENTED BY: Advocate Candice Slump - competition law litigation specialist
