Practicing law is a business. As a law firm owner or employee, how you manage clients' experience with the law and your office, affects the bottom line. Basic business skills, financial management, risk management, marketing, public relations, employee relations, compliance, and business development mechanisms need to be in place to run a sound legal practice.

This four-hour course will cover topics such as:

- Business planning and strategy
- Financial management
- Human resources and team building
- Risk management
- Marketing and public relations
- Compliance
- Business development
