Section 37C of the Pension Funds Act, 1956 imposes various duties on the Board of Trustees insofar as the distribution of death benefits is concerned - without providing any guidelines as to how it is to be achieved. Failure by the Board to properly investigate the matter renders its decision reviewable and will amount to maladministration.

This course will explain the process to be followed in terms of section 37C. The cases discussed will provide guidance to trustees.

The ideal course for principal officers, trustees, legal advisors, fund administrators, fund consultants.
